

Nigeria: Nigerian First Class Construction Mgt Student Honoured in UK

Atika Balal, Abuja

A Nigerian student from Bama, Borno state, Ibrahim Baba Shehu, currently studying for Masters at University of Manchester, who graduated with a distinction in construction management from the same University in 2007 has been honoured by the Nigerian High Commission.

Ibrahim Baba Shehu was honored recently along side Chinwe Maureen Chidobem a by the Nigerian High Commission in London for their outstanding academic performance in their educational career. Baba Shehu who studied Construction Management in his first degree, graduated with a first class from the University of Manchester in the United Kingdom, while Chidobem had a masters degree in MBA from the University of Bedfordshire, where she graduated with a first class.

Chinwe Maureen Chidobem

In a private ceremony, The Nigerian High Commission in London honored the two students for their outstanding performances. The acting Nigerian ambassador in the United Kingdom Nwanna Dozie told the Gathering that it is the usual customs of the Nwanna disclosed to the gathering of diplomats friends and family members of the two students that, the immediate past Nigerian Ambassador to the United Kingdom, Christopher Kolade had instructed Nigerian High Commission in the United Kingdom to honor the two outstanding Nigerian citizens who have excelled in their various chosen academic career, in line with the tradition of The High Commission.

Baba Shehu, who responded to question from Daily Trust on phone, says despite whatever fortune in the UK , he is returning to Nigeria after his masters programme to help with his knowledge and skills towards contributing to the development of the economy.

On the relevance of the course of his study, he told Daily Trust that the construction Industry in Nigeria is big, capable of creating more jobs and wealth for people and families.